Irritrol – TC-15EX-R – Total Control 15 Station – Outdoor Outdoor – no external transformer required ready remote control 8 1/2”H x 1/2”W x 5”D The Irritrol® Total Control is 174; the I-R family of controllers is proven that advanced actions need to be complicated. Developed to meet a wide variety of irrigation needs, the Total Control Series is available in models ranging from 6 to 48. Programming flexibility is provided by four independent programs, 16 independent start times and a 365-day schedule for odd/even day scheduling. The Total Control-R is compatible with Irritrol Climate Logic® 174; weather) and SMRT Logic® 132;®; (mobile app communication) products designed to save time, water and money. Documents: Sell Sheet User Guide User Guide 24-Station If you’ve got one of thes then you226;AA d probably know that when the power goes off it resets from 5.00am every day of the week for 10 minus/station. Not very useful in all ®; So if youAAA are leaving for extended holidays and want to be wise with water then this might not be the controller you choose. A controller with a battery back up that keeps only the set times is what you are really looking for. We recommend the Hunter X Core as the best value and quality New to the electric part of it all so speaks s/l/o/w/l/y if you respond... lol... Anyway, my timer at Irritrol Station is flashing “short” on Station 2. I found out the solenoid wasn’t working, so I replaced it. The clock still shines “short.” I took out the power and the battery, but it didn’t work. Is it the clock or the wiring faulty? What am I looking for? How the hell am I supposed to find him? I have one of those portable solenoid actuators and the new solenoid bursts when I use it. I also have an amplifier?? Even, but I have no idea how to use it. (This is what I bought, in Aah! That’s all I know how to do. I checked the and are not corroded or broken. And now? The thought of replacing that watch scares the daylights out of me. On rare occasions something happens that causes the processor to lock. Sometimes programming acts strange, or the clock even closes to work. This would be very likely to happen when during power outages or transients. The good news is that it rarely happens and is easily fixed by doing the following, depending on whether you have an older or new model controller. Follow the steps to A or B below according to the timer you have. A) Describe what to do for older timers (if it does not work for you, do b) for more recent timers a) for previous controllers: perform a complete reset of: (Note, this will delete all your programming) Remove the battery pull the tape cable from the back connector tab (white or yellow card with all the terminals screw) holding the gray tape cable close to the rear clamp and stagnating. SA Press-fit connector This should be relatively easy to remove wait three minutes for any remaining power to fully discharge from the unit. (New controllers need a lot of time to download, so it’s worth taking the time) pull the tape cable (should turn on) Reconnect the battery, reprogram the controller. NOTE: the older timer of the model will have the default program, which is something like: every day, 7am, every station for ten minutes. Be sure to go through all station settings when reprogramming the controller or your dobb sprinklers. If this doesn’t work, you might have a timer that has a new inner circuit but the older case. Try following the following steps for the new controllers. It should start with a 12:00 flash and now it works like You can now set the time and re-program the program. B) For the latest controllers (usually -R models), you can restore factory default settings by making thethis will erase all your programming). Before doing this procedure, you should try doing the basic reset for older controllers first (see above). It can work, and you wonâ t lose 128;t the program settings. Sets the current time quadrant. Place the function switch in the position of the set programs. Position the program switch to select the program ®AAA B.226;AA with the AC power connected, carefully disconnect the MFP cable160; from the rear PC board by grabbing the MFP cable next to the rear terminal board and rotating it until it is turned off. Hour. Open the battery compartment and disconnect the battery. Press and hold the Manual button and continue to hold the button while you take the next step. Connect the MFP cable, then release the Manual button. Note: The display must now show 12:00 AM indicating the controller has reset. If not, repeat the procedure if necessary. Reinstall the battery. Reprogram the controller. How do I know if he took the reset or not? If the reset worked, the time will say 12:00 and program A will have a default program of: start time of 7:00AMM, every day (M-Su), all valve execution times set for 10 minutes. If you don’t see this then carefully reread the passages and try again. What to do if it doesn’t happen is work If you reset the controller and it seems to help, but still behaves strangely now and then, it probably needs repair. Sprinkler timers tend to become intermittent before complete failure. If you can’t make the reset work, contact us for a repair. Contact us ®AA we will send you repair details.
