

Continue

Christmas worksheet color

Free Printable Christmas Coloring Worksheets - Christmas is just around the corner, and what better way to get into the festive spirit than with some jolly coloring sheets! Whether you're a kid or a kid at heart, these free printable designs are sure to bring a smile to your face and spread some Christmas cheer. From jolly Santa Claus to adorable reindeer, there's something for everyone to enjoy. Get into the Holiday Spirit with These Festive Coloring Sheets! Grab your favorite coloring supplies and get ready to unleash your creativity with these fun and festive designs. Whether you prefer traditional red and green or like to add a modern twist with bright colors, the possibilities are endless. These coloring sheets are the perfect way to relax and unwind during the busy holiday season, and they make great decorations once you've finished coloring them in. So why wait? Start printing out these free Christmas coloring sheets and let the holiday fun begin! Whether you're coloring alone, with friends and family, or at a holiday party, these designs are sure to bring joy and laughter to everyone who colors them. Get ready to immerse yourself in the holiday spirit and create some beautiful works of art that will brighten up your home this Christmas. Spread Christmas Cheer with These Free Printable Designs! Looking for a fun and easy way to spread some Christmas cheer this holiday season? Look no further than these free printable coloring sheets! Simply print out as many copies as you need and share them with your friends, family, classmates, or coworkers. Whether you're hosting a holiday gathering or just want to brighten someone's day, these coloring sheets are a great way to spread some holiday joy. Not only are these coloring sheets a fun activity, but they also make great gifts. Simply print out a few copies, add some coloring supplies, and put them in a festive gift bag or basket. Your friends and family will love receiving a personalized gift that they can enjoy throughout the holiday season. You can even frame the finished coloring sheets and give them as keepsakes to cherish for years to come. Spread some Christmas cheer and make someone's day brighter with these free printable designs. Whether you're coloring together or sharing them as gifts, these coloring sheets are sure to bring a smile to everyone's face and make this holiday season extra special. With these free printable Christmas coloring sheets, you can get into the holiday spirit and spread some Christmas cheer with ease. Whether you're coloring solo or sharing with others, these festive designs are sure to bring joy and laughter to your holiday season. So grab your coloring supplies, print out your favorite designs, and let the jolly fun begin! Printable Christmas Worksheets....

Copyright Disclaimer: The images presented on this site are obtained from online sources and are protected by their respective copyrights. We do not assert any ownership or copyright to these images. If you are the copyright holder, please contact us to request removal or proper credit. Last updated: December 13, 2024 by the Homemade Gifts Coloring Team

On the lookout for cute Christmas coloring pages? Well, you've landed on the right rooftop! As we all draw closer to the holidays, I can't think of anything more enchanting than crafting and coloring with my nieces and nephews. Kids just have a way of bringing the holidays to life! These festive holiday coloring pages will take you on a journey through a wonderland of Santa's lively escapades, chatty snowmen, cozy fireside moments, shimmering Christmas trees, and the timeless beauty of the Nativity scene. There's a bit of holiday magic for everyone. []* Got a to-do list as long as Santa's? Christmas coloring pages offer a wonderful way to keep the little ones focused while they count down to the big day. Or, maybe you're babysitting the grandkids and want to color together as an educational holiday tradition! From easy "Merry Christmas" coloring pages, perfect for toddlers and preschoolers, to intricate zentangles for the older, more patient artists (yeah, we're talking to you, teens and adults!), there's a page just waiting for sparkle and color. And don't forget our snazzy ornament templates and frosty snowflake designs! Cute Merry Christmas Coloring Pages This treasure trove of free printable Christmas coloring pages says "Merry Christmas" in style. Not only are they fun to color, but you can also incorporate them into your wrapping paper, or include them in a gift! []] Easy Christmas Coloring Pages for Kids Easy Christmas coloring pages take all the stress out of the holidays, whether you're printing them to entertain the kids (or grandkids) or simply need a some relaxing coloring of your own during the busy holiday season. Beautiful Holiday Coloring Pages Can I tell you a Christmas secret? The following holiday coloring pages are some of my favorites, and I hope that you find something that you like here. From cozy fireplace scenes, to elegant trees and ornaments, these Christmas coloring sheets are a little more challenging but totally worth it! Christmas Religious Nativity Coloring Sheets In this section, you'll find some religious pictures of the Nativity, the journey of the Magi (the three Kings), and Christmas angels to color in. Simply click on the image or link below to view and print your Christmas coloring page. 500+ More Christmas Coloring Pages Your festive coloring journey has only just begun! We've decked our virtual halls with collections featuring all your festive favorites: from jolly Santas to radiant reindeer, twinkling Christmas trees to ornate ornaments, snugly stockings to playful elves, and cool snowmen to boot! Click the links below to unwrap a treasure trove of even more festive Holiday coloring sheets, and let's color this wonderful season merry and bright! []*] Left Right Christmas Game Instructions, Stories, & Free Printables Looking for a fun holiday game to play with friends and family? Unwrap the festive fun this December with the Left Right Christmas Game! The exciting way to open presents is to play this popular gift exchange game. Whether you're a seasoned pro or a newcomer to this holiday activity, our blog will guide you through this beloved tradition that can make your Christmas celebrations even more memorable. We've even got two great printable LEFT RIGHT stories for you. Christmas Cards & Messages Looking for more Christmas pages? Check out our collection of Printable Christmas Cards, plus a huge range of messages and wishes to help you write your greetings too. Christmas Card Messages Merry Christmas Wishes (incl. funny) Happy Holidays Wishes (incl. funny) Christmas Quotes Christmas Greetings for Cards Season's Greetings & Messages Christmas Trivia Holiday Messages to Employees Christmas Messages to Employees Christmas Wishes for Friends Christmas Poems Christmas Funny Poems Religious Christmas Messages Christmas Religious Poems Christmas Prayers Christmas Bible Verses Kids' Christmas Poems Printable Christmas Cards More Xmas Cards Merry Christmas Images New Year Wishes New Year Quotes New Year Bible Verses Happy New Year Images And don't forget to check out our fabulous free printable letter to Santa templates, and you can even personalize your own letter from Santa reply too! Does your family have an Elf on the Shelf? If so, you might be interested in our Free Printable Elf Goodbye Letter. For more festive fun, dive into laughter with our Christmas Jokes, Snow Puns, and Winter Jokes for Kids. And if you're looking for more activities for your children, explore our Christmas Word Searches, Christmas Word Scramble, and Bible Word Search Puzzles. Popular pages Free Christmas Tree Coloring Pages for Kids of all ages! Free printable coloring pages of beautiful and festive Christmas Trees to color this winter. We have a huge variety of unique and realistic Christmas trees, trees covered in snow, decorated Christmas trees with ornaments, and even Christmas tree cookies to color in. If you're looking for fun Fine Motor Skills Activities for December, check out our Holidays & Seasons Fine Motor Bundle! Free printable Christmas tree color sheet that is decorated with gingerbread men, snowman, candy canes, hearts, stars, holly and more! Simple yet elegant Christmas Tree for students to color in this Winter. This Christmas tree features a candy cane striped stump, holiday garland, ornaments, Christmas lights, and best of all Christmas presents for holiday coloring fun. This magical Christmas tree is covered with ornaments, stars, and lights. This detailed coloring sheet has twinkling lights in the background a variety of Christmas presents to color in. Our free printable Christmas Tree coloring pages will provide your kids with a wide variety of coloring sheets to choose from. You'll find blank trees, trees with ornaments, ribbon, garland, stars and more. We've even created a ton of free printable Christmas tree templates you can use for your own Christmas crafts and art projects. This simple Christmas tree coloring sheet features a beaded garland with simple round ornaments. You could use this with Q-tip painting for fun fine motor skill work. Free full blank Christmas tree for students to draw, color, and decorate with their own ornaments. Color in these beautifully decorated three winter Christmas trees with a snowy winter scene. Featuring snowflakes falling and decorative Christmas lights and ornaments. This whimsical coloring page features three fluid-looking Christmas trees to color with a fun party in the background. This coloring design is great for Christmas Party invitation cards, simply adjust your printer settings for alternative print sizes. Will all of these choices, your students can create their own Christmas Tree Coloring book, or print multiple Christmas trees to a page and use them as Christmas cards. We've designed these coloring printables for easy PDF download so you can print and reprint for your kiddos. This is a free printable coloring page of a more realistic Christmas Tree. Students can decorate the tree with their own designs. With a variety of ornaments of all sizes, this makes for a colorful Christmas tree once students finish coloring it in. This winter tree is covered with snow! Students will love to color this beauty or use a little glue and white glitter on the snow for a simple Christmas craft. Christmas Trees Coloring Pages Here is a simple Christmas tree for young toddlers and preschool students to color in. Features simple round ornaments for easy coloring. Sometimes a skinny Charlie Brown Christmas tree is just too adorable to pass up! Students will have fun with this modern coloring page. This Christmas Tree Cookie is ready to be decorated with your kid's favorite color frosting! Colored in Christmas Tree If that is not enough holiday fun, we have even more pictures of Christmas trees to color! Our coloring images are custom designs we create just for you and your children. We love to make engaging illustrations that will excited and delight your young artists. For students who want a little extra fun this winter, try our free printable Christmas Mazes next! There is something hiding in this Christmas tree! Encourage your students to write a story to go alongside this fun and engaging writing prompt coloring sheet. This festive design will allow your students to color in each geometric section with different colors for a fun and unique look. This is a beautiful and ornate Christmas Tree for children and adults to color in. Each section includes different shapes like a Christmas candle. Coloring builds confidence and fine motor skills. There is more to Christmas trees than just coloring! If you have students who like to get hands-on with arts and crafts projects, try these free Christmas crafts and activities. This page is helpful if you're looking for simple Christmas tree outlines and templates you can use for your art projects. Great for kids who want to add their own decorations as well. This is a beautiful and ornate Christmas Tree for children and adults to color in. Each section includes different shapes like a Christmas candle. We've designed 8 fun and festive coloring sheets to create a variety of different Christmas designs and effects. Our free Christmas coloring sheets will have your students begging for more—and you'll have a great variety to provide them with! If you're looking for more simple Christmas activities try our free printable Christmas Color By Number worksheets. This is a free printable Christmas Tree Coloring Page featuring striped lines for students to color in. Encourage students to decorate each row like a Christmas ribbon. This Christmas Coloring Page features a stained glass effect. Encourage students to color each section with a different hue of the same color, or create a bright tree with random colors. This whimsical Christmas Tree Coloring page has a hand-drawn effect with strings of lights for students to color in. These are great for making a colorful Christmas tree with rainbow lights. This Christmas Tree has a geometric look with rows of ribbon and flocked branches. This is a great tree to color using different hues of the same color. Try complementary colors for contrast. This cute Christmas Tree Coloring sheet features delicate ornaments strung at varying heights. It's a simple yet adorable little tree and makes for cute Christmas decorations. This printable Christmas Tree is great for children and adults alike. It has a polished look with a pin-cushion effect that makes it great for decorating the house with your art, or for sending as a Christmas card. This little tree is filled with ornaments! Use the tip of a Q-tip or flat top of a pencil eraser to dip and dot colorful paint over the tree. Alternatively, use colored pencils and build find motor skills to decorate this Colorful Christmas Tree! If you're needing a simple, blank Christmas Tree for your own art projects, here is a free template you can use. This will give you a simple outline, trunk, and Christmas Star. Use with thick black line illustrations and patterns, these holiday coloring sheets are great for preschool, and students of all ages. 20+ Free Christmas Tree Coloring Pages for Kids of all ages! We've designed fun and festive Christmas tree coloring sheets to create a variety of different Christmas designs and effects. Our Winter tree coloring sheets will have your students begging for more—and you'll have a great variety to provide them with! These festive reindeer are ready to be colored in with holiday hues! You'll find a wide variety of free printable Christmas Reindeer Coloring Pages for students of all ages. Nothing says Christmas like a visit from St. Nick! Your students will delight in coloring these free printable PDF pages of Santa Claus himself! Find simple, easy to color pictures of Santa. Not only do we have a huge collection of winter snowflakes to color, but you'll find a variety of Christmas-themed snowflakes as well. These beauties include Christmas trees, snowmen, candy canes and more. Free Christmas Color by Number printables for kids of all ages. Our Christmas color-by-code worksheets are more than just color-by-number pages! We've included free Christmas color by addition, subtraction, rhyming words, sight words, color by multiplication, division, and more! Free printable candy cane coloring pages for kids. Find Christmas candy canes, winter, snowmen, snowflakes, gingerbread men, and even penguins with candy canes! A fun selection of holiday coloring sheets for students of all ages and abilities. Here are 20 affordable, fun, and creative craft ideas you can do with your completed coloring pages! To make Christmas-themed suncatchers, you will need transparency paper sheets and tissue paper in a variety of colors. You're going to print off the illustration of your choice - I highly recommend the snowflakes, candy canes, crosses, or Christmas sweaters - onto the transparency paper. Then you'll instruct your kids to "color" in the lines with the tissue paper, cutting it down to size to fit within the outline you have chosen. The result, once finished, is beautiful window decorations that will catch the light on those gorgeously sunny, snowy days. You can choose any number of my Christmas coloring pages for their delightful characters, like the Disney Christmas illustrations or Elf On the Shelf. You're going to have your kids color in just the figures and then cut them out. Next, they're going to trace the cut-out onto a piece of cardstock or construction paper and then cut out that outline. Then they're going to paste the two pieces together and paste a craft stick on the back of the cardstock if they like. Then it's up to their imaginations to see what kind of scenarios play out! For this craft, your kids can pick from any number of my Christmas pages. I recommend Disney, elves, snowflakes, or even the Christmas sweater illustrations. You're going to print off the page onto shrink sheet paper and have your kids color in the figures with markers. Then they're going to cut them out and punch holes where they want the ornament to hang. Bake off the shrink sheets per the instructions and let cool. Once cooled, string the ribbon through the holes and tie it off. Perfect for Sunday School or a craft at home, you can turn my Nativity coloring pages into little mini-Nativity story books. Have each child contribute one page if you're at the head of a classroom, or each child does two or three pages. Have them write on the page a little sentence about what is happening and then color in the illustration. Bind the pages together using a three-hole punch and some twine or ribbon. Using my Christmas stocking coloring pages, you can encourage your kids to create fun, textured, eye-catching designs. Have them use puffy paint or pom poms, glitter glue, or glue with glitter - the possibilities are endless, and the only limit is your imagination! You can turn many Christmas coloring pages into decorations for a party, whether it's at home, in the workplace, or at a third-party site like a restaurant. If you're having the party at home, get your kids in on the action and have them color in snowflakes, Christmas stockings, Christmas lights, or gingerbread men (to name a few). You can use them as wall hangings, table décor, and placemats or place settings at the food table or even hanging from the ceiling. Use your wreath coloring pages to make glittery designs. Your kids will have a blast decorating the illustrations. You can either use glitter glue (in a dispensing pen) or glue and glitter. If you're going the latter route, basic Elmer's glue will do. Encourage your kids to follow the outline of the wreaths with glitter glue or glue (and then go in with the glitter before it has dried). Once the illustrations are dry, you can hang them on the fridge or the wall! Any of my Christmas coloring pages would make amazing greeting cards - the toughest part will be deciding which ones to use! Using a word processor or illustrator, you can resize the drawing so that it takes up half or a quarter of a page and fold accordingly. Get your kids to help out by coloring in the pictures and writing sweet Christmas messages on the inside and out. If you're taking the month of December to read Christmas-themed books, why not make Christmas-themed bookmarks to keep track of where you last left off? You can do one of two methods (or both!). First, have your kids pick out and color in the figures of their choice and cut them out. Trace the cut-outs onto cardstock, cut out that outline, and then paste the two pieces together. You can also punch a hole and string ribbon or yarn through the top. The second method involves folding a piece of paper per these instructions: you can get your kids to choose a figure from my coloring pages. Have them color in just the head (or a small illustration), cut it out, and then paste it onto the back of the bookmark. Another cute craft that you can use my Christmas coloring pages for is to help your kids write Dear Santa letters on the pages. Pick illustrations with enough space to write a few lines and then a list of all the presents your kids hope that the jolly elf will bring. If your kids love an illustration but there really isn't enough room to write a letter, you could use the back of the page, too. There are lots of Christmas coloring pages that could be used to create beautiful table centerpieces for your family's December dinners. From the gingerbread houses to Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer, there is a design that will suit your table. You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two pieces together. Next, they're going to cut a slit up the trunk, about two inches high. Then they'll take another piece of cardstock or construction paper and cut it into a two-and-a-half-inch high arch, about three or four inches long. Make a two-inch slit in the top. Then they're going to fit the pieces together, sliding the arch into the tree trunk along the slits. The trees can then stand up on their own! You can also enlist your kids' help with coloring and cutting out the illustration. Reinforce the cut-out with cardstock or construction paper, and then paste a half or whole toilet paper roll to the back to help it stand up. Using one of my Christmas tree illustrations, you can make a stand-up centerpiece that is perfect for any flat surface in your home, including the fireplace mantle or a coffee table. Have your kids color in the Christmas tree design of their choice, and then give them pom poms to glue on as ornaments. They'll then cut out the tree and trace the outline onto cardstock or construction paper. Then have them cut out the outline and paste the two