Copyright A © 2021 InfoSpace Holdings, LLC, A Society System1 You probably know that New York, Los Angeles, and Chicago are American cities with most people. These metropolis will still be among the 15 largest US city in 2046, but only in terms of population. The largest and most scoring American cities have hundreds or thousands of square miles and are bigger than some states. All the city we are about to visit are enormous, but position n. 1 On our list is much larger than three United States. Combined. 15. Suffolk, Virginia Sprawling City Suffolk, Virginia, Borders North Carolina and Chesapeake Bay. | Fotoquy22 / iStock / Getty Images Size: 400 square miles Population: 90,237 Can a mammutin city be hidden everywhere? Well, Suffolk tries. It is located west of Norfolk and Virginia Beach in the south-east of Virginia, and extends from the border of North Carolina to the north of the Chesapeake bay area. The size of the city combined with a population of 90.237 breaks at about 225 people per square miles. Next: the growing Criminality are a problem in this city. 14. San Antonio The Walk river is a famous San Antonio Vista, but there is much more for the city. | | Images Size: 460 square miles Population: 1.51 million San Antonio is one of the United States city that deal with increased criminality rates, and we can understand why. At 460 square miles, it is one of the most disadvantaged American cities. San Antonio has added 66 new people every day in 2017, which makes it a rapidly growing city in the United States. Next: Not a surprise at all. 13. Los Angeles This is just a fraction of the Earth in Los Angeles. | Choness / iStock / Getty Images Size: 468 square mile Population: 3.99 million If most people had to choose a city like the Son Poster for Sprawl, I would probably choose Los Angeles, what with its endless roads making life miserable for drivers. It extends from the feet of the National Forest of Angeles to the north to the south to the Pacific Ocean, which is about 10 miles south of the center. When you combine all that land and all those people, it's the way you finish with one of the most dirty cities in America. Next: the first of the four capitals. 12. Nashville, the boundaries of Tennessee Nashville approach Kentucky. | Seanpavonephoto / iStock / Getty Images Size: 475 square miles Population: 687,560 The capital of Tennessee is also one of the most contemptuous American cities at about 500 square miles. The city boundaries extend so far to the north that the Kentucky border is only 10 miles away. Unlike some great cities (both physically and in the population), it is possible to have a house with a courtyard and a garage and still be within the limits of the city. Next: Visit this city spread while you can still. 11. Phoenix This view gives you an idea of how great the phoenix is. | iStock.com/ Eutoch Size: 516 square miles Population: 1.62 million If you have been to Phoenix and enjoy the activities of the center, only seen a hamlet of the city itself. It extends 20 miles north of the city center, which makes it one of the most traiting cities in the United States. If you went to the capital of Arizona and I liked your time there, make sure you come back soon. It will be so hot by 2100 you are not able to visit. Next: You need to pack a night bag if you travel in this city. 10. Houston Minute Maid Park and NASA Mission Control are 25 miles away and still in Houston. | G. N. Lowrance / Getty Images Dimensions: 599 square miles Population: 2.31 million Houston is distributed, expensive and overpopulated, which are three reasons why nobody wants to live there any more. A aerial view of Houston city limits looks like a gigantic Rorschach test stain. The control of the NASA mission and the minute of the Minista of Houston Astros, the center of the Maid Park, both within the limits of the city, are 25 miles away, and the city extends well from where the field is located Baseball. Next: All that ground cannot help potential residents. 9. Oklahoma City Oklahoma City extends in every direction from the center. | Saul Loeb / AFP / Getty Images Size: 606 square miles Population: 643.648 A more than 600 square miles, Oklahoma City is one of the most tempadic American cities. The city has a lot of land, but it is not helping potential residents. The real estate sector in the capital of Oklahoma is as expensive as always, so it has become much more expensive to buy a house there. Next: Head to the north. 8. Butte, Montana in Guardia Butte, Montana, who has more soil than almost all other American cities. | Janie Osborne / Getty Images Size: 716 square miles Population: 33.901 Butte is hidden between Yellowstone National Park to the south-east and several national forests to the north and west. The fingerprint chair and the relatively small population only mean butta houses of about 47 people for Square. It's a big city and sprawling of the Big Sky Country, but needs to add more ground to become the largest city of the Montana. Next: You can stay at the limit in this differential city. 7. Anaconda, Montana Anaconda has a share of the beautiful open spaces of Montana. | Chris Boswell / iStock / Getty Images Size: 736 square miles Population: 9,106 We are still in Montana, but Anaconda has a larger big And a much smaller population density than the nearby Butte, which is a few miles south-east. You can stay on the edge of the continental gap just outside Anaconda, which only has 12 people per square mile. Next: One of the most scarce cities in America has two other distinctions. 6. Jacksonville, Florida Jacksonville has areas on the Atlantic Ocean and areas at 50 miles inland. | Sean Pavone / iStock / Getty Images Size: 747 Square Miles Population: 892.062 Since we discuss a sprawling American city, you know that Jacksonville is one of them. The parts of the city sit on the Atlantic Ocean, but other parts extend more than 50 miles in the hinterland. Jacksonville also has two other remarkable distinctions: it's one of the United States city with most churches. It contains almost 1,500 churches, temples, mosques and other saints sites. Taxes are incredible. Jacksonville has one of the lowest individual fiscal charges of any American city. Among buildings, sales, cars and income taxes, residents pay little more than $ 2,700 per year. Next: We are in a state the rest of the way. 5. Anchorage, Alaska as its cousins of Alaska, anchoring is one of the most tempadic American cities. | Dimensions Chilkoot / iStock / Getty Images: A, 1,704 square miles Population: 294.356 Take the unpleasant of the way soon. Anchoring is one of the most polluted city of the United States since many residents use winter heat stoves. Most residents live in the city center near Turnagain's water bodies and Knik arms. However, there are also north-west houses near the feet of the Chugach State Park. Next: This city is distributed. 4. Wrangell, Alaska you don't have to go far to find water in Wrangell, Alaska - the city sits on an island. | Joshanon / Getty Images Size: 2,541 square miles Population: 2,521 Alaska is larger than Texas, California, and Montana, the next three larger states, put together, so the cities are free to spread. Wrangell is one of them. The city occupies the north-western part of the island of Wrangell, which is just off the mainland of Alaska near the British Columbia, Canada. It is detached and poorly populated with one person for square miles. Next: two combined states are barely larger than our next city. 3. Juneau, Alaska Juneau, Alaska, is a sprawling city that takes up more than 2,700 square miles. | Chaolik / iStock / Getty Images Plus Size: 2,717 square miles Population: 32.094 Juneau is the only capital of the United States state to give another country. Part of it is because most of the states have no international boundaries, and another part of it is that Juneau is so damn great. If you combine Rhode Island and Delaware, their 2,989 square miles are barely larger than Juneau. Another funny fact? It's a city with a foreign number of millionaires. More than 9% of the population is part of a millionaire family. Next: a beautiful town A ¢ ¢ ¢ "if you go to the population. 2. Sitka, Alaska Sitka is a beautiful town, but it is only small based on the population. | Z-Lex / iStock / Getty Images Size: 2.874 Square miles Population: 8.689 Some people say that Sitka is one of the most beautiful small towns than the US, but this is only if you go to the population. When you look at the square mileage, it's one of the most disadvantaged American cities you'll find. City boundaries extend through different islands on the Pacific Ocean, and the mix of Inuit and Russian influences helps make it beautiful and unique. Next: It is n. 1, and it's not even close. 1. Yakutat, the Glacier Dell ' Alaska Hubbard is part of Yakutat, Alaska, the largest US city with a wide margin. | Michael Pegram / iStock / Getty Images Size: 9,459 Square Population: 605 You have two great reasons to visit Yakutat. First of all, see the Hubbard glacier, which is about 20 miles from the city center and one of the breathtaking natural wonders not to be missed in the u .. The second is to say that you have visited the largest city in America, according to Thindco . A more than 9,400 9,400 Miles, it is larger than eight states: Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Hawaii, Connecticut, Delaware and Rhode Island. Heck, Connecticut, Delaware and Combined Island Rhode are more than 1,500 smaller square miles than Yakutat. All population figures are the 2017 estimates from the U.S. Office. Census Bureau.
