HowLongToBeatPokemon Shield NewsLoad More Haunter is one of the original 151 Pokémon that has stood the test of time, even receiving some major changes due to its power. So how and when do you evolve Haunter in Pokémon Sword and Shield? Haunter is evolved through trading, so you'll need to open up the Y-Comm ingame and select from one of the trade options. This means a local trade is best as then you can ask your partner to send the Gengar into your Pokédex and also what level to evolve it at to get the best moves, stats and ability. Haunter doesn't evolve in Pokémon Sword and Shield by being traded. If you want to trade with random people nearby, open the Y-Comm by pressing Y and then both must choose Link Trade. After that, you can close the menu as the trade will start. If instead there is someone that you want to trade with, then you'll need to open up the Y-Comm and choose Set Link Code. At this point, you can choose to either agree upon a code to get connected (which will be faster) or just close the menu to automatically connect. Online trading requires access to Nintendo Online is a subscription service that offers cloud saves as well as the ability to access online access for certain titles like Pokémon. Hit the + button while in the Y-Comm menu and tap Start Trading, which will then cause you to be paired with a random person to trade with. Keep in mind that you can also try doing a Surprise Trade, which involves you picking any Pokémon from any box, and a random partner will be picked to give you a Pokémon through. I will admit that I just used to put out all the junk Pokémon I got from doing IV breeding but don't tell anyone. Press + while in the Y-Comm menu to enable you to switch between Local and Online connection, and select Surprise Trade from the menu. Now of course, once you trade you to switch between Local and Online connection, and select Surprise Trade from the menu. won't count towards your Pokédex. So it's best if you do a local trade with someone you know, so that they can send the Gengar back to you. Otherwise, you can just keep doing surprise trades to see if someone eventually sends you a Haunter that turns into a Gengar. When choosing what level to evolve Haunter, one of the best things to keep in mind is the moves available to either Haunter or Gengar via Gastly. For example, level 40 sees Gastly learn Shadow Ball, whereas you have to wait for Haunter receives so there is not much reason to delay the evolving into Gengar as unfortunately Body. Levitate gives total immunity to Ground-type moves, and seeing as these three Pokémon are Ghost/Poison type, it removes a major source of damage as they are now totally immune to Ground. Cursed Body is inferior as it means that when a move hits Gengar, that move has a 30% chance of causing the attacker to get disabled. Unfortunately this doesn't apply if the attacker doesn't physically hit Gengar, such as with Ice Beam. It also won't cause more than one disable if a move is already disabled. Pokémon Diamond and Pearl. They are classified as being in generation VIII, matching Pokémon Sword and Shield. This means that the evolving of Haunter into Gengar will follow the exact same method for Pokémon Sword and Shield Evolution in Pokemon SS. We have included Item and Level Requirments for each

According to the google doc linked from SheerSt's github, Haunter evolves with the Dusk Stone, Machoke evolves with the Sun Stone, and Poliwhirl evolves with the Water Stone.
 Simply trade Haunter with a friend, then trade it back. Alternatively, a Linking Cord can be given to Haunter to evolve it into Gengar. The Linking Cord is a new item in Pokemon Legends Arceus that works in the same way as classic evolution items like the Leaf Stone. Well, luckily, you can evolve it on your own, and all it will cost is one Pinchurcin Trading is one of the Special Evolution methods found not only in Pokémon Scarlet and Violet, but every Pokémon encyclopedia. The Gengarite (Japanese: ゲンガナイト Ganganite) is a type of held item introduced in Generation VI. It is the Mega Stone that allows Gengar to Mega Evolve into Mega Gengar. In Pokémon Legends Arceus, you can use the Link Cable item to evolve any Haunter into a Gengar without trading (also works for other trade evolving pokémon like Onix and Machoke). How do you evolve Haunter alone? Haunter evolves to Gengar at any level when it is traded; however, you can get this Pokémon solo, but it still requires trading with an NPC. The Ghost-type Pokémon is not only an essential part of completing one's Pokédex but also a great aggressive team member. What level does Haunter evolve? How to Evolve Gengar evolve? How to Evolve Gengar evolve? How to Evolve Gengar evolve?
