regardless of the mass of the object. The first part was the initial value problem. To show that $y(t)$ satisfies the differential equation has a family of solutions, and the initial condition determines the value of C . Figure 3.1: For a baseball falling in air, the only force acting on it is gravity (neglecting air resistance). Notice that there are two integration constants: C_1 and C_2 . This gives $\int \int v(t) dt = -9.8t + C_1$. The next step is to solve for C_2 . Find the velocity $v(t)$ of the basevall at time t . Go to this website to explore more on this topic. An initial-value problem will consists of two parts: the differential equation and the initial condition. (Note: in this graph we used even integer values for C ranging between -4) and 4). Furthermore, the left-hand side of the equation is the derivative of y . The differential equation $y'' = -3y' + 2y = 4e^x$ is second order, so we need two initial values. We are able to integrate both sides because the y term appears by itself. Because we are solving for velocity, it makes sense in the context of the problem to assume that we know the initial velocity, or the velocity at time $t=0$. This is denoted by $v(0)=v_0$. Example 6: Velocity of a Moving Baseball A baseball is thrown upward from a height of 3 meters above Earth's surface with an initial velocity of 10 m/s, and the only force acting on it is gravity. In this section we study what differential equations are, how to verify their solutions, some methods that are used for solving them, and some examples of common and useful equations. If $v(t)>0$, the ball is rising, and if $v(t)$
