Remember the following rules for using other time expressions: Use after, as soon as, the moment that, until before using the past perfect simple. Ex: After she had moved out, I found her notes./ I didn't say anything until she had found someone new. The past perfect simple is used to describe one action that happened before another action in the past. In many cases a complete sentence is written in two parts with two different tenses: The past perfect simple, to refer to the action that happened second or later Sometimes the past perfect simple is used on its own and the action that took place afterwards is understood. After Sofie had finished her work, she went to lunch. (First she finished her work and then I washed the floor.) Harold had known about it for a while. (First she knew about it, then others knew about it) The past perfect simple tense is formed by using the auxiliary verb had together with the V3 (past participle). The V3 (past participle) form of a regular verb in the past simple: walk > walked / study > studied / stop > stopped / create > created There are quite a few irregular verbs in English though It pays to memorize them. Subject had +Verb(V3) (Past Participle) Rest of Sentence I / You / We / They He / She / It had met him before he became famous had lived here for three years by the time we met Note: The order of phrases may be switched, but the meaning will stay the same. By the time Doris got to the party, everyone had gone home. Everyone had gone home by the time Doris had got to the party. Note: Had Had - A verb combination that often causes confusion in the past perfect simple is had had. Ex. I had had enough to eat but I wanted dessert anyway. The first had is the auxiliary (or helping) verb and the second had is the V3 (or past participle) of the main verb to have. It means that even though I ate enough, I wanted dessert after that. It may look strange, but it is correct. Contractions in the Past Perfect Simple When you begin a sentence with a time expression, put a comma (,) after the first part of the sentence. We often contract the subject (the person or thing that had done the action) and had: I had > I'd - After I'd used the phone, I paid the bill. He had > He'd / She has > She'd / It has > It'd - It'd happened so quickly, I didn't notice. We had > We'd / You have > You'd / They are > They'd - We'd just gotten home, when we heard the blast outside. Negative Sentences in the Past Perfect Simple Tense When creating negative sentences, we use the auxiliary verbs hadn't (had not) together with the V3 (past participle) form of the verb. You can also create a negative sentence by using the auxiliary verb had with the time expression never and then the V3. Subject Auxiliary verb had with the time expression never and then the V3.
