Several artists have recorded cover versions of the song; these include Jackie Cruz, ngela Aguilar, and Cristian Castro. Selena: The New York Times writer Joe Nick Patoski named his biography of Selena after the song. Contemporary reviews have been positive; essayist llan Stavans said the emergence of Latin pop in the United States in the 1990s is attributed to the popularity of "Como la Flor". Scholar Deborah Pardez lauded Selena for innovatively blending unexplored genres of African American music into the Tejano genre, which she believes led to the song's success. The Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA) has certified "Como la Flor" of the most video uploads of people lip syncing to a single song in one hour.[1]It took 10 years for A. B.
