When drawn upright, The Sun symbolizes joy, vitality, and success. It represents clarity, positivity, and the power of self-expression. This card encourages you to embrace your efforts are rewarded, and your goals come to fruition. It reminds you to celebrate your achievements and share your light with others. This card also speaks to the beauty of simplicity and childlike wonder. However, it cautions against arrogance, overconfidence, or taking your success for granted. Upright Keywords: Joy, Success, Celebration, Positivity, Warmth, Fun, Enlightenment, Vitality, Confidence, Truth The Sun represents optimism, joy, and faith. Its likely the most positive card in the entire Major Arcana. When it appears, it suggests that were not only feeling extremely happy, but we also have faith for the future ahead. The Sun shows that we believe in abundance. We have faith that there is always enough to go around in the world, that we can always get what we want, and that everything will get betterno matter the situation. The idea behind The Sun is that weve learned to trust the Universe around us. And the comfort of simply letting go and having faith that everything will be okay, is not only a mature stance, but a practiced one. The Major Arcana is considered to be a representation of the heros journeymeaning that each card, from The Fool to The World, are gradually imbued with more serious undertones. The first half of the Major Arcanawhich includes cards like The Lovers and Strengthrepresent more identity-building themes and naive characteristics. The second halfincluding The Tower and Deathrepresent cards of high-caliber themes. Because The Sun (19th card) is so deep into the Major Arcana, its faith isnt unhinged or unjustified. It comes from a place of personal peace and happiness within. So, its much more mature in that way. Reversed meaning: If the upright Sun symbolizes utter happiness and joy, then the reversed version of this card can indicate that we don't have enough joy in our life. In fact, it sometimes represents a time when we are so low, we might even be feeling depressive symptoms. We may feel detached from society in that nothing good happens for us or that weve missed the boat of happiness in some way. Astrological significance: The Sun has a very simple connection to astrology; it represents the planetary sun. The sun, in astrology, represents our ego, identity, and core personality. Its the biggest essence of who we are. While that person can change over time, most notably, the sun indicates how healthy and happy our ego is. So, The Sun tarot card can actually symbolize how good we feel about ourselves on any given day. If you pull The Sun in an upright position, we might be feeling really good about ourselves and can see themselves and can see themselves achieve the best in the future. So, naturally, a reversed Sun card can indicate the opposite. It suggests someone whose ego is out of check and imbalanced. This person will likely feel poorly about themselves. They may also feel as though their contributions in life arent recognized or important and therefore, they dont feel important. So, this isnt just about feeling confident in ones self. Its also about feeling seen. Numerological significance: The Sun is the 19th card in the Major Arcana. If you bring 1 + 9 together, you get the number 10. This number represents a level of perfection and completion, but also new beginnings (1). We talk about The Sun as a card of both happiness and optimism for the future. Happiness might be associated with 10 as a number of completion. However, optimism might be associated with 1, due to its forward-thinking mindset. Key actions: Simply believe in yourself and the fact that anything you dream of is possible. Even if your life isnt perfect now, believing that it can get better is the first step toward manifesting better to you. Happiness starts from within. This card really promotes the fact that if you feel good about yourself, then youll feel great about life. Create a gratitude list. This will help you set your mindset in a more positive headspace. Create a vision board. The Sun is all about believing that anything is possible.
What better way to do that than by offering a visual of those things for you to look at every day. Hang or place The Sun tarot card in a prominent location in your house. Sometimes, we need a visual reminder to make the most of things that make you happy. This one seems obvious, but its what The Sun is all about! Whatever it is that brings you joywhether it be eating cake, going on nature walks, or spending time with your dog. Literally go outside. The Sun is fueled by positive, radiant light. It can sometimes help if you attempt to absorb that energy via the actual sun itself. Its even better if you can fuel your body, mind, or soul at the same time. For example, sitting in an environment that you love (like the beach). Another example might be setting up a picnic with your favorite food. See a therapist. If you find that youre pulling The Sun in a reversed position a lot of the time, it might be helpful to seek out help from a licensed professional. Oftentimes, The Sun reversed tells us that inner work needs to be doneparticularly around confidence, self-esteem, and self-worth. Yes/no meaning: The Sun is almost always a YES. When it appears upright, it tells you that youre on the right path. In fact, who you are as a person matches exactly with what youre doing or trying to achieve. And when it appears reversed, its still encouraging you to follow that dream. But instead, its suggesting that you work from within to get the support that you need at least one person starts with YOU. Full list major arcana: The Sun represents success, radiance and abundance. The Sun gives you strength and tells you that no matter where you go or what you do, your positive and bring you happiness and joy. People are drawn to you because you can always see the bright side and bring such warmth into other peoples lives. This beautiful, warm energy is what will get you through times and help you succeed. You are also in a position where you can share your highest qualities and achievements with others. Radiate who you are about. If you are going through a difficult time, The Sun brings you the message you have been waiting for: that things will get better, a lot better! Through the challenges along your path, you discovered who you are and why youre here. Now you are full of energy and zeal for the future and can already perceive success and abundance flowing to you. You are brimming with confidence because you know everything will work out it always does! Life is good! The Sun connects you to your power base not fear-driven, egotistical power, but the abundant, inner energy radiating through you right now. Youll sense it in your Solar Plexus chakra, calling you to express yourself authentically and be fully present in the world in a big way. Tap into your power and use your Divine will to express that power in positive ways. The Sun is also an energetic card. It reflects a time when you can expect to experience an increase in physical energy, vitality and general positivity. You are bursting with enthusiasm, invigorated and enjoying a wonderful sense of good health. back to top Overview of the Minor Arcana When you first start learning Tarot, the sheer number of Tarot cards and their meanings can feel overwhelming. The Minor Arcana is often overlooked in favour of the Major Arcana, but understanding these 56 cards is crucial to gaining a full picture of what a Tarot reading, and how the suits are structured. Our individual Tarot card meaning pages above deep dive into each card meaning, but here well explore the broader framework of the Minor Arcana and how these cards are divided into four suits: Swords, Wands, Cups, and Pentacles. Each suit contains 14 cards (Ace through 10) and 4 court cards (Page, Knight, Queen, and King). While the Major Arcana represents significant life themes and turning points, the Minor Arcana focuses on the day-to-day. These cards reflect the smaller, but no less important, moments of our livesour actions, emotions, relationships, and challenges. Together, they add depth and nuance to a reading, they usually highlight everyday events, situations, or feelings. They can point to actions you need to take, obstacles to overcome, or lessons to learn. Unlike the Major Arcana cards, which often represent the bigger picture or forces beyond your control, the Minor Arcana tends to address areas where you have the most influence or agency. For example, the appearance of Minor Arcana tends to address areas where you to focus on improving communication, managing your finances, or balancing your emotions. These cards provide practical advice and insights into what you can do right now to create positive change. If the Major Arcana create the big picture of where you are headed, the Minor Arcana are the directions to get there. that can help you overcome tough times. It allows us to see the brighter side of life and highlight our best qualities. The Sun tarot card brings a message of joy and love and expels fear and the need to live in our ego because it provides a sense of wonder, amusement and goodness. The Sun is the pure life force of everything and everyone on Earth. We are all dependent on its energy and power. In the Rider-Waite deck, the sunflowers under the Sun tarot represent the four elements: fire, earth, air and water. They also depict the four suits of the Minor Arcana: wands, pentacles (or coins), swords and cups. In the front of the card, a naked babe rides the white horse, showing the purity of heart and innocence of the Sun. The reason the child is in the nude is because the Sun exposes all. The Sun brings transparency, honesty and the truth. The red flag allows for renewal and renunciation, while the image of a smiling Sun alludes to triumph and accomplishment. Since the Sun is the nineteenth card in the Major Arcana, it numerologically translates to the number one (1+9=10), which we break down further to 1+0=1), aligning with new beginnings, confidence, leadership and independence. In general, The Sun is among the best tarot cards in the deck since it embodies warmth, radiance, life, joy, optimism, productivity and new horizons. The Sun allows us to understand ourselves, do and conquer what we love. The positivity of the Sun card is an excellent omen signifying that everything will work out as you want, that there are no red flags on the horizon and your journey towards self-discovery will be beneficial. The sun can also mean that you must be honest not just with others, but with yourself. The Sun card, in reverse, denotes a lack of confidence or understanding. It shows that you must believe in yourself and others to overcome adversity. If we take a little deeper look at this tarot card in its reversal, we see that the smile on the Sun becomes a frown, forecasting a negative outcome. Since the reversal is the shadow of the Sun, it can also indicate that you must let go of a situation holding you back or something secret brewing beneath the surface about to be revealed. More often than not, the Sun reversed Sun serves as a warning that one needs to take a step back to reassess matters to discover new ways to move forward with others or in a situation. The Sun card has diverse meanings based on the queries being asked in a reading. child waking up again after a dark night of the soul. The Sun card often comes up in a tarot reading after periods of uncertainty to say, its time to step back into your confidence. Heres the planet itself, the Sun can also illuminate too much. It can reveal things we werent ready to see or bringing too much intensity to a situation that needs subtlety. It can also point to ego if taken to the extreme. But more often than not, its a huge yes. In the Rider-Waite-Smith tarot, the Sun features a child riding a white horse in its birthday suit, arms open in pure joy. The child wears a flower crown and waves a red banner like a victory flag. Symbolically, the child is meant to represent you, returning to your natural, innocent self. And the fact that hes riding the horse without a saddle suggests he (and you) and in perfect balance. Behind them is a stone wall, representing boundaries and structure, along which vibrant sunflowers bloom tall, nurtured by the radiant sun shining from above. The Sun card arrives to let you know youre on the right path. After periods of confusion thanks to the Moon or the hardship you experienced with the Tower, youre now stepping into clarity, optimism, and self-trust. It shines a light on your strengths and invites you to live more freely, unburdened by fear or the need to prove anything. This card is about shining fully, claiming joy, and allowing your inner child to feel safe again. It often indicates successful outcomes, warmth in relationships, creative breakthroughs, or renewed vitality. In love readings, the Sun is one of the most positive cards you can pull. For couples, it usually suggests harmony, shared happiness, and a relationship that feels expansive and life-giving. It can also point to taking a connection public or rediscovering play within the partnership. If youre single, the Sun often means youre radiating confidence and drawing others toward you. Its a sign that the love youve been wanting is near. In a career context, the Sun generally signals success, recognition, and projects that align with your true passion. Your work may be seen more clearly now, and youre likely entering a phase of visibility and reward. Let your talents shine. Financially, this card brings good news. Whether its abundance flowing in or simply a sense of peace around your finances, the Sun encourages celebration and gratitude. When reversed, the Sun cards intensity may be dimmed, delayed, or distorted. You may be struggling to see the good in a situation, or feeling drained despite things looking fine on the surface. This card can also point to ego, burnout, or the pressure to perform positivity. If youre feeling overexposed or overly optimistic without a plan, the Sun reversed suggests slowing down and returning to your center. If you get the Sun reversed in a love reading, it can suggest missed connections or moments when joy is available but isnt being fully embraced. Maybe theres fear around vulnerability, or one partner is craving more freedom than the other is comfortable with. If youre single, the reversed Sun might indicate that youre radiating outwardly, but feeling disconnected inside. Its a call to reconnect with your sense of wholeness before leaping into something new. In work, a reversed Sun may signal burnout or the disappointment of unacknowledged efforts. You might feel unseen or like your work doesn't light you up anymore. Financially, it may be a nudge to look at spending or investing habits more clearly. There could be overconfidence or unnecessary risk-taking. Return to what makes you feel grounded. If you get the Sun in response to how someone feels about you, its almost always a good sign. They likely feel joy, openness, and warmth in your presence. You make them feel safe to be themselves. And, theres a genuine desire to connect. If the card is reversed, they may still care deeply but feel uncertain about how to express it. There could be a desire to protect their freedom, or they may be struggling to match their external glow with internal clarity. The Sun is a strong yes. This card brings joy, success, and clarity. If youre asking about timing, growth, or outcomes, the Sun says go for it. This is one of the most positive affirmations in the deck. If reversed, its still a yes. There may be delays, misunderstandings, or inner blocks to your joy. But overall, the energy is still bright and forward-moving. Want to Learn More About the
