Link letters random together to form words and clean as many lines you can! By Ken Michaels, writer invited in the Shakespeare game $\hat{A} \in \mathbb{R}^m \rightarrow$ "Hamlet $\hat{A} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ " Polonius asks the prince $\hat{A} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ "What do you do, my lord? $\hat{A}, \hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ " By no means satisfied with what he intends? Reading, replicates the hamlet, $\hat{A} \in \hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ WWords, words, words, $\hat{A}, \hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ $\hat{A} \in \hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ I I described previously The communication model in which a sender encodes a message and then sends through some channel (or a half) to a receiver, which decodes message, and ideally understands what was sent. Certainly, The most common way of encoding a message is to choose the most appropriate words for the listener or reader. In Hamlet's case, he did not like what he read that he described elementary, as mere words, rather than a message . Then I thought I would dedicate myself a little paint to words. \sim Nym $\hat{a} \hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n \hat{a} \hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n \hat{a} \hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n$, \rightarrow Specific words that end in NYM describe classes of words. Some of the most frequently used NYM words are synonymous (means the same that); Antónimo (means the opposite); Homemonim (has the same sound); and acronym (a word derived from the first letters of a more complex term such as diving or AIDS). Homo means $\hat{A} \hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ s "Same $\hat{A} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ " and hetero means $\hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^m \rightarrow$ "different. Therefore, if there are homemarks, it represents the reason that there are also heteronyms. While the homóvels have the same sound, but different plays (like pairs and panra), the heteronyms are spelled the same, They have different meanings and often pronouncement: a person sewing is a sewer, but a repository for the residues is a sewer. Sewage, then, is a heterometer. But Nym's words do not end up here. One of the sites I have recently visited 2 lists no less than 26 words Nym, many of which are quite arcane and of interest to relatively few. Some are frankly fun. We really need a word to mean another composite word of two two parts? If yes, then tutu, pawpaw, yo-yo and bye are tautonyms. A couple of weeks ago, my son asked me what is meant by a metal. I did not know, so we looked up. In retrospect, I would like to have been able to launch, as $\hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^m \rightarrow$ "Meta $\hat{A} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ " means change. A metal is a word that designates something for a word that is associated with it. For example, Hollywood is a metal used to mean the industry of the US movie image, while the crown refers to royalty, and the bottle refers to the Alcool. My use of expression "A small ink" a pair of parades is also a metal for written communication, even when no real paint or written on paper is involved. The purpose of all this has to do, with the use of our language. It will not do me well to code a message using a word like more, or heterónim or tautão, unless I'm sure my listeners (or readers) are familiar with their meaning, or that, or I am prepared to add the definition to your benefit, in which case you may have used the definition first. Still ssim learn the proper use of words, however arcane, may be it useful, and if you like words, even fun. What is your language? In his book "The half-life facts: why everything we know has an expiration date," discusses Samuel Arbesman3 discusses mudanAşas in language that occur over time, and the two camps vA'em this fenA' mention differently. It explains prescriptive grammaries like those who focus on how words should be used and descriptive grams like those who are more concerned with the way they are used. Arbesman states that all indivAduo develops its prA'prio set of rules on how to use words, and all of us, you, me and everyone - has our prA'prio personal idiolect. This delightful term describes our language and A'nico f Padra the speech, as determined by what we learn when $\hat{A} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ young branches, and by whom estA close from us, and include our gramA'tica, vocabulary, words and pronA'ncia © Ata even our accent. There is an important lesson here. If we actually communicate effectively, we need to be aware that every time we encoded a message, someone whose language is significantly different from our own can decode it in order to get a different message. Therefore, it pays to be careful with our choice of words; It's really a message, or simply $\sim \hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n$ Words, words, words $\hat{a} \in \mathbb{R}^n \rightarrow$? © 2013 Ken Michaels.
