enctype Attribute

It specifies how the browser encodes the data before it sends it to the server.

Value	Description
application/x-www-form-urlencoded	All characters are encoded before sent (spaces are converted to "+" symbols, and special characters are converted to ASCII HEX values) multipart/form-data	No characters are encoded. This value is required when you are using forms that have a file upload control text/plain	Spaces are converted to "+" symbols, but no special characters are encoded

<form enctype="multipart/form-data"> apart from controller and action we also can define asp-area, asp-route, asp-route-returnurl="@ViewData["ReturnUrl"]" etc. Razor page application is a new addition to asp.net core framework. Razor page application is best suitable for single page application, architecture wise it looks very similar to MVC, here every page comes with a model definition, if you are familiar with MVC, then you may find it very easy to implement. Now if you notice I have specified fields in two different ways, first one Using MVC style and other one using asp-for="propertyname", both works fine! @Html.TextBoxFor(m => m.FullName) Email: Mobile: Example 2 .cshtml: Using MVC form syntax with three fields @using (Html.BeginForm(FormMethod.Post)) { Full Name @Html.TextBoxFor(m => m.FullName) Contact Numbers @Html.TextBoxFor(m => m.ContactNumbers) Email @Html.TextBoxFor(m => m.Email) } Razor Form Submission Once you submit the form, you can access the submitted values in your codebehind OnPost() method Now here we have given two examples This one will work only if you have Model associated with the form Example.cshtml.cs: public void OnPost() { var name = FullName; var email = Email; var mobile = ContactNumbers; // now you have all submitted values in local variables } This example will work in both situations, with Model and without Model Still you can access properties using Request.Form["fieldName"] public void OnPost() { var name = Request.Form["FullName"]; var email = Request.Form["Email"]; var mobile = Request.Form["ContactNumbers"]; // now you have all submitted values in local variables } Handling Multiple Actions For Form in Razor Page In some situation you may need to have multiple action buttons, in such situation you can write separate named handler methods, and in action tag helper specify the handler method name. In razor page we can create form in two ways Using simple html form tag Using MVC form syntax With both type of form tag we can work using model and non-model. @using (Html.BeginForm(FormMethod.Post)) { Full Name @Html.TextBox("FullName", new { @class = "searchTxt" }) Contact Numbers @Html.TextBox("ContactNumbers", new { @class = "searchTxt" }) Email @Html.TextBox("Email", new { @class = "searchTxt" }) } Now this you may find little different than earlier approach, for every form element there is tag we can define inside form tag, this is also known as form with tag helper. Here we learn both form tag and with & without Model Razor Page Form without Model Example Example 1 .cshtml: here is a simple html form tag without Model with three fields, the way we used to write in classic asp, php etc Name: Email: Mobile: Example 2 .cshtml: here is an example Using MVC form without Model syntax with three fields. Razor Page Form with Model Example Create Model for Razor Form First we create a simple Model with few properties , each property has to have a [BindProperty] attribute public class ContactModel : PageModel { [BindProperty] public string FullName { get; set; } [BindProperty] public string ContactNumbers { get; set; } [BindProperty] public string Email { get; set; } } Example 1 .cshtml: here is a simple example of html form tag with Model with three fields. Here we learn about how to work with form in Asp.Net Razor Pages, PageModel, Handler Methods, Leveraging Model Binding, Handler method parameters etc. Register Request Info Now in codebehind specify the method name with OnPost Prefix or Async Suffix public void OnPostRegister() { var name = Request.Form["FullName"]; // now you have all submitted values in local variables } public void OnPostRequest() { var name = Request.Form["FullName"]; // now you have all submitted values in local variables } Now if you notice above methods name "OnPost" + value of asp-page-handler You should also read razor pages handler methods in Asp.Net Core
