This set of free kindergarten graphic organizers is designed to help your students focus on identifying the main idea and details in literature. This PDF download with 22 free graphic organizers is designed to fit into your kinder classroom. Students will find just-right practice with this download. This is another free resource for teachers and homeschool families from The Curriculum Corner. Use these free kindergarten graphic organizers for literature during your reading workshop. You will find organizers that cover standards for kindergarten classrooms. These worksheets will help your students as they are developing reading comprehension skills in an early learning room. This collection of 22 graphic organizers will address the kindergarten standards addressing key ideas and details. Students will work on using these graphic organizers when identifying characters in a story along with the setting. Some students will be ready to identify the problem and solution after hearing a story. Children can also practice retelling a story they have heard or read with the use of these organizers. Another skill that can be taught is making connections. There are organizers for text to self connections, text to text connections and text to world connections. How to Use These Graphic Organizers To begin, make sure you model the graphic organizers. You will want students to see a completed organizer before they work on their own. This will help them see what is expected. In a kindergarten setting, you might enlarge as posters and complete as a class. Another idea is to laminate and use during small group instruction with teacher support. Remember, if you are asking your students to write on the organizers, provide support. For example, you might give students a word bank with words they could need for the task. In kindergarten, you will have many students not yet ready to complete these without help. These 22 graphic organizers will help with these standards: Literature Standards for Key Ideas and Details With prompting and support, ask and answer questions about key details in a text. With prompting and support, retell familiar stories, including key details. With prompting and support, identify characters, settings, and major events in a story. Beginning-Middle-End Handout On this reflective writing worksheet, students are asked for the title of a book or story that they have read or heard. Then, students fill in boxes to record what happened at the beginning, middle, and end of the story. Click here to print. CCSS.ELA-LITERACY.RL.1.2: Retell stories, including key details, and demonstrate understanding of their central message or lesson. Using this Beginning, Middle, End Sequencing Graphic Organizer, students describe the major events that occur in the beginning, middle, and end while reading. Keeping events in order is an important reading skill for students. This graphic organizer is a good companion for your students to use as they read to keep events in order. This graphic organizer provides ample space for students to jot down ideas about the events, problem and solution as they are reading. Other resources to use with this Beginning, Middle, End Sequencing Graphic Organizer If you are using this graphic organizer, your students are probably working on sequencing events. Use this Sequencing Graphic Organizer Worksheet as an additional resource to support your students. Introduce this graphic organizer by using the Picture Sequencing Activity. Then, ask students how sequencing can help them while they read. Readers can use the graphic organizer as they read to collect important events. Share out events to check that students have chosen main events. This graphic organizer is great to support students as they are reading independently at home or at school! Be sure to check out more Sequencing Worksheets Please write a review! Tell others why you love this resource and how you will use it. Every fiction story is going to have a beginning, middle, and an end! Being able to identify these in stories will help students grow in skills such as plot structure, problem and solution, rising action, character traits, and more in future years! Because teaching the parts of a story is so critical, I want to share with you all today a few of my favorite strategies for teaching and reinforcing story sequence. Using these tips will help your students begin to see the structure of a story, every time they read! Using Classic Stories to Reinforce Sequencing When teaching beginning, middle, and end, I think it's easiest to begin with classic stories. Students will already be familiar with classic stories such as The Three Little Pigs, or Goldilocks and the Three Bears (just to name a couple). Because our students already know these stories, there is less of a mental hurdle for them to cross. They can comprehend these stories more easily, freeing up their brains to consider how the story begins, how it develops, and how it ends. After students can easily spot the sequence of the text in familiar stories, you can build on the skill with new texts, and with small group texts that they are unfamiliar with! Retelling Pictures A great way to scaffold re-telling is with picture cards. For our kindergarteners, it is a lot of mental work to ask them to listen to a story, remember it, and then re-tell the key details of the story in order without visual prompting. Re-telling picture cards give students those visual cues that they need to remember key details, and place them in order. After ordering picture cards, you can ask students to orally re-tell the story, or even write about it. Graphic Organizers Graphic organizers are the next step of complexity for our readers. If students are easily naming the beginning, middle, and end of a story out loud, then have them write about it! For students who struggle with writing, I recommend allowing them to draw quick pictures of their thinking first. This will get their thoughts moving, and make it easier for the writing to get on the paper! If you want to try a FREE graphic organizer, you can download one in my TPT Store HERE! To get your students started with re-telling, using classic stories, check out my Beginning, Middle, and End Bundle! Read more about this bundle in THIS POST. Happy teaching!
